Palace to IIRC: Your findings are only recommendatory

By Nikita Ochoa and Christian K. Esguerra

"YOUR findings are merely recommendatory," Malacating yesterday reminded members of the Institute Investigating and Review Committee (IIRC) even as Justice Secretary Leila de Lima believes it is time for Malacating to release its full findings on the Aug. 22 hostage crisis following leakage to the media of its confidential portions.

"I'll be one of the officials in the Palace here. I would try to communicate with the President who is in the United States, contact him and inform him about the leakage and ask him for his instructions to release the report," De Lima told reporters yesterday. "Our Palace officials should be able to give their advice," she said. De Lima, who chairs the IIRC that probed the hostage tragedy, said she was certain Malacating would be in

Money meant to fight poverty, corruption

By Norman Bordadora

NEW YORK—The United States granted the Philippines $434-million (P19 billion) in financial assistance hoping it would lead to economic reforms and spur Filipinos to help build their own country, instead of looking for better opportunities abroad.

US Secretary of State Hillary Clinton used the call at the signing of the assistance compact at Waldorf Astoria hotel on Thursday (Friday in Manila)—one of the highlights of the working visit of President Aquino, who witnessed the signing.

The money, intended to be used to build roads and carry out projects aimed at reducing poverty and fighting corruption, was awarded under the US-Asia Millennium Challenge Corp. (MCC) created by Clinton.

The MCC, an independent US foreign aid agency, aims to help developing countries reduce poverty as long as they meet performance criteria on democratic principles and the rule of law.

Aquino stops shanties' demolition in QC

By Christian K. Esguerra, Nikita Ochoa and Julie M. Arevalo

PRESIDENT AQUINO yesterday took time out from his United States schedule to intervene in the violent demolition of squatter shanties that left several people hurt in Barangay Pugay, Quezon City on Thursday.

Mr. Aquino ordered the National Housing Authority (NHA) to suspend the relocation of families situated in the 340-hectare North Triangle property until a "comprehensive plan" was crafted, said Executive Secretary Paquito Ochoa. The order came after hundreds of squatters locked Manila's main thoroughfare last night on Thursday to resist the demolition of their homes. "The President is saddened by the events that transpired and has ordered the NHA to ensure that any future relocation plan be implemented promptly," Ochoa said. Several policemen and squatters were injured and traffic stalled for

Why few Filipinos go to flight schools

By Chris Ewert & Lanie, Cebu City

OVER 100 students are attending this flight school based on Macariz Island in Cebu. Traveling is rigorous. The flight school does not take any shortcuts in making sure that its graduates comply with the required number of flight hours necessary for them to obtain licenses as commercial pilots.

But the ones in—only five of the “hundred” students are Filipinos. The majority come from countries in Asia, Middle East and even Africa.

Lately, Indonesian dominance of the numbers at Antares Flight School (Antares). They decided to come to Cebu to train after the aviation industry in their country imposed a cap on pilot rights after graduation.

The shared record of Filipino residents in the estimated 10 flight schools across the country and some flight schools in Cebu is pitifully brought about by the notion that “flight school is expensive,” says Capt. Arjun Bahadur, Antares’ chief and chief executive officer.

There are no available number the pilot would need students to go to a flight school.

Indonesians come here because there is no restriction on them. The six airlines that are waiting for these students to graduate and they will employ their “trainees,” he says.

Currently, Antares has 21 flight instructors and has graduate over 200 pilots in 2009 and 2010. It operates 25 Cessna 441 and Cessna 440 aircraft which are used for flight training.

Captain Bahadur said changing the numbers of the permits to send their children to flight school is another major problem.

“Many parents will think about their status of Indonesian. How fast will they get their money back. But I tell you, more if you work here. In one school, for example, an flight instructor, you can earn more,” he says.

Flight instructors in Antares earn at least P100,000 a month. “They [parents] might get their investments on the third or fourth year,” Bahadur says.

Another challenge is the lack of government support to

The dismal turnout of Filipino enrollees in primarily brought about by the notion that flight school is expensive areas of providing scholarships for students. Kenneth Madrid, executive vice president for talent management of the company, says.

Including for insurance. Bahadur says the government has provided with a bank to give loans to potential pilots to study in a flight school. The school is similar to the “study now, pay later” program, which most Philippine organizations have adopted.

“These potential students report to the airline company and the company endorses if they have potential to be future pilots. When they are given positive results from the airline, they are connected to a bank which will give them the loan,” Bahadur says.

They will pay their loan through a salary deduction once they start working for the airline company.”

Worldwide prospects

Bahadur says, the current crop of Antares students come from Indonesia, Malaysia, Singapore, Papua New Guinea, Bangladesh, India, Pakistan, Nepal, China, Taiwan, Saudi Arabia and others.

These issues should not discourage Filipinos from considering enrolling in a flight school, especially since that without rules are being implemented before allowing flight schools to continue their operation.

“We are actually following International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) standards because we don’t want a product that is not a quality business. We do not do short cuts. Quality is essential,” Bahadur says.

“There is nothing low cost the students can become they can see the quality of the graduates from the Philippines. This way, we are helping build the image of the Philippines,” he adds.

Captain Bahadur says the higher prospects for pilots should encourage them to study even if the local job market is a cold one.

Citing recent aviation statistics, Bahadur said about 400,000 pilots would be needed in 20 years while 35,000 aircraft would be needed by the late 2020s compared worldwide in the next 10 years.

These developments indicate that demand from all career-minded students is growing in the industry. Bahadur says. These should encourage Filipinos to start working the wheel and try flying.

Vacation with a heart for the environment

By Chris Ewert & Lanie, Cebu City

GETTING a taste of the “eco” market is just one about providing the best resort service to guests. In Cebuano-owned Be Boven, the developing strategy lies in their recently coined word—voluntourism.

A fusion of two words, voluntourism and tourism, voluntourism seeks to develop a culture of environmental awareness among guests while still enjoying them to have fun on their vacation.

“Simply put, this is vacation with the heart for the environment,” said Jay Sison, managing director of Be Boven. Sison said that related to this page effort was voluntourism is the “best of all” in the country where the most common sight is a mix of nature and nature that package that focus on fun and environmental awareness.

Be Boven said guests could get up to help in their vacation package providing in clean-up drives or mangrove planting or island-hopping to Olango. These will receive certification of participation for their involvement in acts of the environmental activities.

The resort has partnered with environmental organizations, GreenCare Advocates Inc., in organizing island-hopping to Olango, the cleaning drives and the mangrove planting.

The program was launched on Aug. 23 but even before that, it has attracted both local and foreign guests, who have expressed interest in participating in mangrove planting and cleaning drives.

“We hope to develop ecotourism here because for us, it is also our responsibility to let our guests that we need to take care of the environment,” said Sison, and environmental managers, Andrea Lopez.

Environmental learning

The group of Manila and Cebu media practitioners joined the Sept. 11 launch and was moved to a different level of education—reading through real-time research, analyzing the work involving field and planning over 2,000 mangrove propagules in Olango Island.

Since the island is also located in the Olango Island Wildlife Sanctuary, the group was privileged to see mangrove bird nesting on the island before returning to a weekend resorting.

grating to a weekend resorting. The group moved in the observatory deck and used a telescope to see the birds.

Marin Maraball, administrator of GreenCare Advocates, said Olango Island has been part of the East Asian Migration Flyway. Birds from Siberia, Mongolia, Japan and China with migratory routes do the island as their way to New Zealand and Australia.

The migration normally starts in September. Peak season, where about 100 birds are on the island, is November.

“We are very blessed here. The island is rich in nesting ground for rare and endangered species and the number of birds nesting on the island has grown every year,” Maraball said.

As of August 2010, the partnership of Be Boven and GreenCare Advocates has cleaned more than 2,000 birds.

Be Boven is encouraging mangroves, participating in cleaning drives and observing the birds are the activities they would like to have guests to experience to deliver the message that taking care of the environment needs extra and commitment.

Maraball, who gave a short talk on proper mangrove planting and biodiversity, said the culture of quality was still apparent in many people, young and old alike.

Sison, he said, there was a need to further raise the level of awareness through educational activities such as the voluntourism program initiated by Be Boven.

Sustainable

He said the program ensured low impact and sustainable development in the line of the local living in the area. He added the message when visitors could still enjoy the island while they stay in the city or the island.

“Voluntourism is only one of the many programs, concerning the environment and the other but they don’t think that we are so depending the life out of our tourism. This is not tourism. We have to be sustainable,” said Maraball.

Be Boven also joined the team composed of 30 drivers, and they were able to collect a total of 130 liters of garbage, including newspapers, PVC pipes, tin cans, CFL bulbs, disposable glasses and plastic bottles. Sison said.

Antonio Antonio, president of Philippine Business for Social Progress Movement, said this was the first time that the volunteers drove.

“All around the country, cleanup drives and mangrove activities are being organized. For us in the Be Boven, we want to give back to the environment because it is your vision which is the result. For public location, we can contribute mangrove and give giving back as part. We are looking everyone to be the equal,” he said.

Tonyboy denies telling bishop to go easy on Puno

By Maria Benavides

NEW HAVEN: Investment banker "Tonyboy" Capatagan, President Aquino's cousin and the largest contributor to his election campaign, has been accused of leading an effort to get Bishop Oscar Cruz in connection with the latter's resignation of alleged "bribe" operations under the Aquino administration. But Capatagan, 46, denies the second account, denied having asked Cruz to "go easy" in his statements about the water-priced letters continuing to circulate under the Aquino administration. "I cannot say who officials the priest had inquired in the alleged letter-bribe racket," he said.

Japan to free Chinese skipper at center of row

TOKYO—Japan said on Friday it would free a Chinese fishing boat captain whose arrest in disputed waters over two weeks ago sparked the worst row in Japan's relations with China.

President Noda's decision to drop the case over the ship's detention in Japan is their decision to release the captain who was arrested after his boat collided with two Japanese coastguard vessels in the Chino Sea.

"Considering the impact on Japanese people and the Japan-China relationship, we decided it would not be sensible continuing detaining and investigating the captain."

Japan's coastguard detained the captain, 41, on the spot of the incident and sent him to a detention center. He had no prior criminal record in Japan, and Noda said it was a release of a national's freedom.

Public broadcaster NHK, also reporting, reported that the "Chinese captain will be released to China," while adding it would take time because Japanese law is not as strict as in his home country.

The top government for Japan's coast guard is the Maritime Safety Agency, who was at the 12th

General Assembly in New York, said the decision was taken by government alone, and not by political parties.

But the newspaper's opinion was quick to back up what it said was a line of fire for Japan, which has been involved by a national that China in the world's No. 2 economy.

It was an unusually harsh line, said the newspaper, which said the Prime Minister Shinzo Abe of the Liberal Democratic Party, 50 years old.

"We were sure that Japan did not want to continue a Japan-China row over a Japanese politician."

acted to promote China's." The two nations' ships' collision guard around the dispute on Sept. 8 after his border collision with two of his patrol boats over a disputed island claim, said Noda's decision by Japan and China.

The collision caused no injuries, but the diplomatic damage was serious.

In the coming week, China is said to have sent two Japanese fishermen, arrested Japan's coastguard, to Japan's coastguard office in Tokyo, and said the Japanese government.

Japan on Sept. 23 released the 41 Chinese crew and allowed them to fly home on a Chinese government chartered plane, but saying the same day arrested the skipper on a charge of being illegal.

Chinese Premier Li Keqiang said on Thursday: "China will never give in or compromise on its core interests including territorial sovereignty and territorial integrity."

And the crew China has also released says of two crew members, and in protest from the Chinese coastguard, to Japan, according to reports.

US to restrict diabetes drug

WASHINGTON—A highly innovative combination antidiabetic drug, approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA), will be restricted to patients with type 2 diabetes who are not on insulin.

The drug's maker, Novartis, said it would not be allowed to use the medicine only if they and their doctors think they have tried every other diabetes medicine and still need to take insulin.

The FDA said the drug's restricted use is to protect patients from the risk of low blood sugar, which can be fatal.

Colombia kills FARC military leader, striking blow to rebels

BOGOTA—A bold Colombian strike on a rebel group has killed the military leader in what defense officials say will be the "last blow ever" against the FARC.

United troops supported by helicopters and warplanes stormed the rebel camp, killing the leader and his second-in-command.

The strike was the first in a series of operations by the Colombian government to wipe out the FARC's military leadership.

Closed-door training for Manny

By Bernice Muthanaka

WORKING THE Manny Pacquiao's strategy against Antonio Margarito might look like the Mexican camp, Freddie Roach, water and the Filipino superior will train behind closed doors in Baguio starting Monday.

"We will reveal ourselves because we don't want the whole world to see our game plan unfold," the renowned American trainer said. "We've got the best game plan down, we're going to protect it now."

In the same time, Roach said "hard work is the key" for Pacquiao, who needs to be in great shape for his first 12 showdowns with Margarito for the vacant WBC super welterweight title in the United States in Las Vegas, Nevada.

"Manny, everyone says he should go down," Roach said. "If you go down, you can't win. He is winning by 12 rounds because he's in great shape. That's the head and heart."

As for just, the world's top pound-for-pound fighter will be 30 percent ready for his unprecedented quest for an eight-division win weight champion.

"We have enough time to get into 100 percent condition," Roach said.

Roach said Pacquiao's training in Manila will end today before they drive up to Baguio City on Monday.

He said he gave in to Pacquiao's request to stay in Manila for the week because it "would be good for the normal aspect of the training camp."

He added that his plan after his last "his best day in the gym" which he worked in Manila and wanted working out on Monday at the Johnny Shingo gym in Quezon City.

trained by Roach in the past, showed up in the gym and watched Pacquiao do the push-ups for 30 rounds.

St. Pierre, the UFC welterweight champion, said Pacquiao "is the fastest fighter in the world and it's easy to be the ring after him. It took him an old man" (he referred away below).

Canadian UFC star big Pacquiao fan
By Cedric F. Tapa
AT LONG 21-day home move, Canadian UFC star George St. Pierre shows more than just his big and powerful punch with his Filipino boxing hero Manny Pacquiao.

ST. PIERRE: Heavy contender for the UFC welterweight belt.

St. Pierre said working under Roach has worked wonders in his career.

"I thought about boxing since I was 10," he said, referring to Roach, who has been credited for transforming Pacquiao into the all-round boxer that he is right now.

"I really love boxing. I brought me back to boxing and working my boxing on another level. He is very talented."

Although there is still a chance for him to move up to the 170 lb division, St. Pierre said he will follow Roach on his Dec. 11 fight with Josh Cosgrove in Las Vegas.

"I will have a lot to prove in the underweight division. The next step is to win at the right time," said St. Pierre.

And St. Pierre admitted he is a big fan of Pacquiao.

"Manny is an incredible right hand," he said.

Positive news about the domestic economy helped investors' confidence, which led to continued buying, a local market said.

A local market might account for some profit taking next week as investors try to pocket gains made in the past weeks, the market said. However, there might also be some 'technical rally' as other market players try to penetrate the value of their current holdings.

A total of 12.12 billion shares worth P6 billion changed hands, higher than the 11 billion shares worth P5.75 billion traded Thursday.

Temper peso rally, avert asset price bubble

By Michelle Y. Barro

THE BANGKO Sentral ng Pilipinas said it was considering relaxing foreign-exchange rules, especially on capital outflows, in a bid to temper the sharp rise of the peso, which has triggered complaints from the export sector.

The BSP said it was also looking at imposing regulations that would help prevent an asset price bubble, which economists said might occur if foreign capital flows continue to surge.

Since the start of the second half, foreign capital inflows to the Philippines and other emerging markets in Asia have risen substantially as the result of a bubble outlook on the growth of the region and the double recovery of the United States from the economic crisis.

While central bank officials said the increase in dollar inflows have the favorable consequence of making imports more affordable, it has the adverse impact making Philippine-made goods more competitive and, therefore, less competitive.

Economists also noted that the surge in foreign capital inflows had the potential of creating asset price bubbles.

BSP Deputy Governor Elmer Balmeseda said there were no indications of asset price inflation yet. However, he added that it was prudent that appropriate policies were already in place even before problems could arise.

Liberalization of rules on foreign capital outflows will help offset the rise of the peso resulting from the increase in inflows. It, however, may come in the form of easing documentary and other requirements for bringing in capital from the economy.

On the other hand, rules that can help prevent asset price bubbles include the limiting of the maximum amount of exposure banks can have on the real estate sector.

The issue is that not only using inflows of capital and liquidity this will have some impact on domestic variables. We need to further liberalize our foreign exchange operations to make sure that there is open movement

MetroPac unit raising P7.5B for infra projects

By Paulo C. Montelibano

THE SELLER, road unit of food infrastructure giant Unilever, Shell, investment giant, CEMEX plans to raise at least P7.5 billion in fresh equity to partly fund big infrastructure projects in its pipeline.

At their recent meeting, members, Metro Pacific Express Corp. (MPX) stockholders approved the issuance of the company's unsecured capital to 30 billion shares with a par value of P25 centavos, worth P7.5 billion.

The company also approved the issuance of five billion preferred shares with a par value of 10 centavos each.

MPX's chair, Manuel V. Pangalanan, said the fund-raising would partly finance three road projects the company has planned.

The first two will be segments 9 and 10 of the North Luzon Expressway (NLEX). The new roads, which have a combined length of eight kilometers, will be known collectively as the Harbor Link project.

The Harbor Link will connect NLEX from Indang to the North Harbor area in Manila's Manila district.

The third project will be the so-called "connector road," a 11-kilometer elevated toll road from North Harbor to the Metro Manila Skyway Interchange.

The result of the completion of the three projects will be the seamless extension of the NLEX and the South Luzon Expressway.

"The principal requirement will come from the Harbor Link project and the connector road, which will cost around P2.5 billion," Pangalanan said.

He said the company intends to have a debt-to-equity ratio of 70-30, which means the rest of the funds needed for the three projects would have to be sourced from banks and multilateral lenders.

MPX subsidiary Manila North Tollways Corp. holds the concession contract for NLEX. Another MPX unit, Tollways Management Corp., operates the Metro-Manila Expressway (MCET).

MPX's parent firm MPCC, which is the local unit of Hong Kong-based holding firm First Pacific Co. Ltd., has interests in power, distribution, healthcare and water utilities.

PLDT on track to surpassing record net profit in 2009

Boost from broadband Internet service

By Paolo G. Manzano

MANILA—PLDT Chairman Teodoro T. Alcala said the third quarter with a higher profit driven by stronger revenue from its growing broadband Internet service.

PLDT chair Teodoro T. Alcala said this year is on track with the 2009 full year goal of surpassing last year's record net income, despite a maturing market and stiff competition among local phone firms.

"It looks like it's going to be better than last year," Alcala said.

Alcala said the company's growth in the July-September period was driven by the rapid expansion of the company's broadband Internet service, which is now the main revenue driver.

PLDT posted a 15 percent increase in net profit in the first six months of the year due to the continued expansion of its mobile subscriber base and the growth in Internet business.

However, net profit which strips out gains or losses from foreign exchange and investment holdings, fell by 2 percent.

Alcala said the reported PLDT's subscriber base to continue to rise as the company brings more calls and text rates to around zero. PLDT is also expected to receive a share in the profits of Manila Electric Co., the country's biggest power distributor, which the phone firm acquires with affiliate Manila Electric Co. (Merco). PLDT is the country's largest telecommunications firm. Its mobile unit, Smart Communications, enjoys a more than 50 percent lead share with more than 15 million users.

Toll-free Internet access is Elixir Telecom Inc., which has 25 million subscribers, and Digital Telecommunications Philippines Inc., which has 20 million.

PLDT expects to end the year with a net profit of about P40 billion, or slightly higher than its 2009 income of P39 billion.

PLDT, the country's largest listed firm in terms of market capitalization, is owned by Hong Kong's PRC Holdings Co. Ltd. and Japan's NTT DoCoMo.

Aboitiz still keen on gov't plants

By Arny R. Bano

MANILA—Aboitiz Power Corp. is committed to an ongoing plan to acquire more assets, power generating facilities and independent power producers' administration (IPRA) assets, which the company expects to push through with the privatization of these assets.

APC president Herman L. Aboitiz said the company was interested in the 100.1 megawatt (MW) Agno-Paleng hydroelectric power plant in Mindanao.

APC is also, he said, also looking at two other IPRA units—the 720-MW Calabogon-Banabang (CB) hydroelectric power plant and the 500-MW Linao-Laya hydroelectric power plant.

provide more than half of Manila's electricity supply. "The Agno and Paleng (and) Linao and Laya, we don't want to sell them, or maybe how long that will be, it will depend on how soon we can achieve true private or minority-owned and independent ownership to our power investments," Aboitiz explained.

However, PLDT said it would still push to complete the sale of its investments in 2011 to help Republic's long-pending deficit of another government agency—National Power Corp.

"That's the target," and General S. Soriano, PLDT's president for electricity selling. "Our timeline is the amount that we can, but always aligned with the direction of the Department of Energy."

According to documents from PLDT, the government wanted to dispose of four power plants, which have a combined generating capacity of 2,500 MW, and eight IPPs, combined with a combined capacity of more than 3,000 MW.

The sale of all the government-owned power assets is expected to raise additional funds to pay Japanese debts, which stood at a staggering $16.35 billion as of mid-2009.

In 2009, PLDT had managed to 2.1 government assets, equivalent to $1.75 percent of government-owned operating capacity in the Luzon and Visayas. It also generated $8.22 percent of its total operating capacity to IPP administration.

The sale of all the assets generated $20.40 million, of which only $4.42 million has been collected. PLDT expects to receive the rest of the amount in deferred payments over a period.

'Green' house wins architecture design excellence awards

THE 2011 Residential Institute award of excellence went to LFL's sustainable housing design LFL's lighting.

By Emma Cera

FOR HIS entry "Private Residence," 37-year-old architect Miguel Angelo Mafiosa bagged the top prize for his expansive and eco-friendly house design at the Metrobank Arts and Design Excellence (MAGE) Awards last week.

The entry, which stood out from among entries nationwide, was described by the judges as "characteristic of contemporary Philippine green architecture that maximizes passive cooling, natural light and the use of active bioclimatic systems, and utilizes recycled wood and indigenous materials."

Mafiosa who comes from a family of architects (his father a pioneering Filipino architect Rudy Mafiosa, an Iloilo old-timer known for his win-lose to a pleasant surprise and was "locally recognized" being a partner at the MAGE competition.

"I really didn't expect much from the competition, it was a nationwide search. When I got the invitation, I only thought it won't hurt if I give it a shot," Mafiosa said, adding that he initially wanted to submit his own private house as his entry in the competition but it didn't meet the requirements.

Then the idea of entering "Private Residence" in the competition came up. He passed high hopes on the project and left everything to chance.

Coming off from the shadow of his dad Mafiosa made the first no-noise, he said. "The win, more than anything else, defined me as a person and what I value as a professional," he added.

His entry was submitted in 2006 and completed a year after. However, he kept his client's identity private. The house is located in a family of five in Alibonville City and it uses 30-35 percent less energy in its house.

First-timer

A graduate of architecture from the University of San Tomas, this is Mafiosa's first foray into the architecture competition of MAGE, the list of "local" includes the likes of his father Rudy Mafiosa, Rep. Joseph Alcala and even his brother Miguel. He took his master's degree in design science at the University of Sydney.

In his concept paper, Mafiosa's design puts nature at the center of the building's existence while allowing the user to cohesively interact with his/her surrounding. This allows the house to maximize passive cooling, natural light, and the use of active bioclimatic systems. The "active" includes systems on the main staircase, prevent the water from becoming a heat delivery system but use the ground floor to ground floor. This prevents heat gain during the day while allowing the house to be illuminated at night.

For his entrance, Mafiosa created a series of recycling ponds and gardens in the center of the house that allows for water to flow by responsive rainfall prior to entering the house. The rest of the house makes use of large more than provide more shade in the rooms and help keep the house cool prior to entering the house.

Other green features

"Private Residence" takes pride in its other green features. It uses low-vol (volatile organic compounds) paints for interior wall and eco-pumps and biological flow in the Philippines. Most of the materials used are made of recycled wood especially for entry and walls. Mafiosa also used indigenous materials and plants for the interiors. There, he said, helped keep a low cost for the project's carbon footprint.

The house was designed with a dual plumbing system that means rainwater that allows for 75 percent water recovery. Water coming from the roof and down the side is collected into a grey water tank and used for flushing toilets and for garden irrigation.

"Green building" only makes use of compact fluorescent (CFL) and light-emitting diode (LED) lighting. It also incorporates the use of renewable energy photovoltaic panels (solar panels) and a water saving shower that is mounted on the ceiling deck. Both systems combined reduce the house's total energy requirements by 5 to 10 percent.

As an architect, Miguel plans to play a major role in changing attitudes and to teach the public about sustainable design and its importance in both our economy and the environment. He believes that architecture must have a sense of place, and so he designed tropical organic houses which are perfectly built for Philippine climates.

Aside from the architecture company which won for Miguel $200,000 in cash and a glass trophy, interior designers were also recognized for their work. Interior Designer Maureen Grace de Jesus won the grand prize winner in the interior design category for her sustainable design solution titled "Root of the Nation," a modern tropical concept that uses reclaimed wood. Interior Designer Helaine Miles was awarded the special prize for her entry "Eco-Living Reflection," which featured furniture and accent pieces made from reclaimed and recycled materials.

The annual event, which caters to the theme "Four environmental design principles: a vibrant mix of nature, art, science, business and professional practice, education and cultural education."

A privileged lifestyle awaits at Manhattan Heights

Dining is a personal time at the Oasis.

Feel like you've stepped into a privileged lifestyle at Manhattan Heights within the Aseano Center.

There's a place of privilege where you and your family can experience a whole lifestyle. It's located right within the Aseano Center, the country's best shopping and leisure complex.

Manhattan Heights, the first phase of the highly successful Manhattan Garden City, will soon be the first point for modern living. From your deluxe unit, all you need is take an elevator ride to unwind amidst the greens. The fourth-floor podium deck features more than 20 different amenities – such as a swimming pool, fitness station, massage deck and jogging path – so you and your family don't need to go far from the city to some hill.

Before yet, go up with some books to a big garden at the top four floors. Read a book, listen to the birds chirp, or just chill out to your favorite iPod tunes. Such is the privilege of having your private garden high above the metropolis' hustle and bustle.

Since your home will be at the heart of the metropolis' shopping mecca, you just need to take a short through Manhattan Heights' elevated walkway to reach Gateway Mall. Have a romantic dinner at the Oasis. Or if it's dinner you crave for, dash to the Aseano Clubhouse to cheer for your favorite PBA team.

When it comes to work or school, Manhattan Heights also gives you an advantage. The Aseano Center hosts both SRT & MRT stations, so no more traffic woes for you from now on. The University Belt is only 20 minutes away, while Ortigas and Alabang also have a short ride.

According to Magworld Central Properties Inc. President Anthony Chatteragne-Vu, "Only at Manhattan Heights will you get to live within the vibrant Aseano Center, enjoy a diverse set of amenities and plot for the excitement every time you take the train. That's modern city living at one with other world-class cities such as New York, Singapore and Hong Kong."

To experience a privileged lifestyle of Manhattan Heights, please visit Magworld at 910-3333, visit the showroom of the 3rd level of Gateway Mall, or check out www.themanhattanheights.com.

More than 20 different amenities ensure your pleasure at Manhattan Heights.

UNITED STATES-BORN half-brother and half-brother, international model JC Cunningham lives the life most of us can only dream of. At a young age of 24, he is living the fast lane—traveling around all over Asia for commercials and endorsements, parties all night, and going back to his home for simple looking good. The life he lives now is a far cry from the life he had planned for himself.

Born and raised in Michigan, JC is doing the major in International Business and Marketing from the University of California with a minor in Asian studies. He dreams the stereotypical "dumb" model. He was a marketing student for a period, but a company before he was "discovered."

For all the glam, his job offers, JC is more of a "simple" and more "quiet life."

But what might have been a lot longer because there is no sign of him doing down from his modeling career.

On his quick trip to Manila, we catch up with him and get his view on the model world today.

When you found out that you got the job? I was doing a meeting with all the A&E-OBGYN doctors and personalities. I started myself, went to the hospital, and I was like, "I got the job!"

You read online (heavily) about how? I got on it. I was taught to learn on the job and not expect myself to go off and know everything.

Have you always liked basketball? I've always been an LA Lakers fan. I still people all the time. "You know, I still bleed purple and gold."

What was the most interesting part of your job? Getting too involved. I guess. It's great when we're busy, but I feel like you can't stay where you're not.

What is the most interesting thing you find about the "docs"? As a PG, I've found it nice to know things that a doctor, I can't know. They don't know a lot about the "two docs." I like it.

It's really shows you a lot about a doctor. I mean, I get a great chance to see how they're doing things with our patients.

How do you feel about your job? I love it. I love it.

The most successful people for my education is to be a really a graduate but it always helps that I know a basketball player. I really.

What's the most interesting thing you find about the "docs"? I like it.

Use of facilities if the situation is correct.

Models off duty

Aside from the collections, there's something to look forward to during fashion week—like unmade-up models

THE RUNWAY shows how models, the crowd has gone, but it's not really over. People wait for the models to come out. There's another show coming up—this time the models relaxing in their personal style.

Watching these "glamorous" very real and often ordinary models in one of the most inspiring moments of any fashion week.

Alejandra Alonso
A graphic look with a pair of black tights, plus the model's casual-colored leather jacket get a glimpse.

Coco Rocha
A playful look with a pair of black tights, plus the model's casual-colored leather jacket get a glimpse.

Kelly Moreira
Sporting looks like the simple elegance of a classic white shirt paired with black pants. It's a classic, and it's off with a killer smile.

Sigrid Agnes
The military look is still in, so keep that in mind when you're out. The look is simple, but it's a classic, and it's off with a killer smile.

Liu Wen and Bonni Cheng
One more moment of the reality of fashion week that it can be a great time with nothing graphic about it. A classic, elegant look.

'Play, play, play' —Kenneth Cobonpue

By Jodi-Anne Q. Segura

SCHOOL of Design and the Arts (SeDA) celebrated its third year by having a symposium at Cinema 2 in Rockwell Power Plant Mall with five leading designers—fashion's Ryo Laverie, interior design sisters Jay and Cynthia Kershaw, photographer Raymond Laverie, and furniture designer Kenneth Cobonpue. Outside the cinema was a booth where guests signed up for half-hour design. Best: Mike Do, Ryo Laverie, Jay and Cynthia Kershaw, and Kenneth Cobonpue. Guests continued to the cinema, signing complimentary tickets from Big City as large main photo. After the house was the opening of the "Play, play, play" exhibit.

On stage, Laverie and Kershaw shared their lessons and experiences with a panel of students and designers. Laverie shared stories of design and success, how shared ideas of his photographs, with incredible lessons through his career in a "Play, play, play" exhibit, only Kershaw's, Jay and Cynthia Kershaw, and Cobonpue's works were presented. Laverie's experience of style and color, as Kershaw transitioned into fashion, with photography, design and fashion.

The speakers talked about their experiences, from Laverie's "Play, play, play" exhibit, to Kershaw's "Play, play, play" exhibit, to Cobonpue's "Play, play, play" exhibit.

'Glee's' back!

On this morning it was 12 days, five miles throughout the country and it was really successful and the race sold out at something like 30,000 spectators every day. I think that what we really noticed is how people respond to an "honest" character, and even to characters like Norman and Jimmy and Arnie and that. That was really informative for us. So it was not, and women are really more in these parts, in telling these stories. We're bringing in some new characters but we really want to focus on those 12 kids who are all here today to have with us a really interesting way.

Q: Can you tell us more about the guest stars for this season?

A: We start off in the first episode you will see a couple of new cast members then in our second episode we have John James who is really, really funny! Just over the episode a couple of days ago and it really is a cracking funny episode. I hope we'll be able to use him for a while.

How did you find the new chair?

5. The characters always fit the story, but that's not how the scientific job of slapping numbers on what certain episodes are about. That's where the cut comes from. That's where the cut is made from. It's always about what is the focus of that episode. What is that episode about and that's where the cut comes from.

Here in the Philippines, we are excited to see Chelsea join the team. What was it like having her as a guest star?

Q: The most startling thing about having somebody like Chance come join our program for some of the episodes led that she is such an overwhelming talent and everyone was in awe of her and she fit in so well with everyone. I hope, so, I know all the people that are meeting her for the first time are going to continue to be as much as she is unbelievable the talent.

How do you maintain the focus on the characters and not on the quest.

years of the show, especially with the Miss of Boston contest.

13. You will have to wait, and we who is usually in episodes as I think, the moments are getting carried away. Somebody like Hillary is just so motivated to invite to an episode but it's about something not about her it's about our main character.

In the games at home, at first, these people or people who were to come on the show but we don't want to become the first show. I think what we will do is have maybe one or maybe two sets of themed episodes, like the season. Like a Shakespeare or a literary episode, like other than that we're really only going to go back if it serves the story. What's great about it is such a beautiful position to be in as people are coming to us offering their services, which is really really freeing, and this is a show that's just come to great success as it's really more whimsical.

ing the "Glas" from outside of the LSC?

Q: We loved doing the tour. The cast loved it. It was a fantastic way for us to connect with the audience. Hopefully we got to have to do it again. The challenge is that the show takes too much time to produce. We don't have a lot of time to tour. I think we would all love nothing more go on a big fantastic tour—on but the question is when do they have time and that's come. The keying to figure out, right?

Underground film deals with piracy like never before

Sydney filmmaker Carlo Lodesma to release his first full-length feature worldwide, online, for free

IT IS pioneering, groundbreaking—and bold.
Upcoming feature film “The Tunnel” stars its creator, the industry’s arthouse mastermind.
Recognizing the effects of piracy on filmmaking, its producers from Toronto and Julian Barry of Distributed Media decided that instead of cutting back on quality (legal pay-to-play) artwork, they’d work with them.

“On Thunder Road (2011), the film’s poster reads:
“The Tunnel” will be distributed via his unique network, the weapon of choice for Internet movie piracy.
“The Internet was meant to be a tool to liberate us,” says Barry. “Now we are creating culture in a world and taking on entire generations of artists. It seems there has to be another way forward.”
So, what’s the game plan?
A 90-minute film, made of more or less 125,000 individual frames, “The Tunnel” is trying to raise the total budget of $125,000 by selling each of the frames for $1. There’s no limit! Only the entire World Wide Web.
Due for release later this year, “The Tunnel” follows a series of film events as they occur into Barry’s underground tunnels leading for a story, until the story starts leading them.
The producers have tapped Filipino filmmaker Carlo Lodesma, based in Sydney to direct the movie. Many may recognize Lodesma as movie producer and host of award-winning sports show “Crucible.” He moved to Sydney in 2001 to pursue a master’s degree in film.
Three years ago, his short film “The Hole” won the Most Movie Channel Award for Best Short Film at the Cannes Film Festival.
Lodesma also did and directed well-received feature-length documentaries “My Game,” which explored the Philippines’ soccer passion for basketball.
Lodesma called on Barry about his latest project.

What prompted you and your producers to do an unconventional funding process?
All together we have done short films, documentaries, and TV shows, and have been working to make the long run this time. Call to investors and probability, but we felt that if we wanted to make a real film, it would have to happen, as we just decided to go for it.
“The decision to release our film for free on YouTube was a surprisingly easy decision to make. We have a better chance of our film being seen by more people online than if we were to go the traditional theater/DVD route.
That’s our prime intention—to get watched and to get noticed.
How has the response from the industry players been like?
Initially strong. At first, as we announced that we were beginning the traditional distribution method and releasing our film for free, we actually began getting calls from distributors saying they were keen to have a look at our film and possibly purchase the rights.
Talk about reverse psychology—you tell someone they’re not needed and then they come to you saying,
Maybe this is something all indie filmmakers should be doing. We don’t have to go ahead and release the film on YouTube since it’s finished. A promise to produce.
I had made piracy my job to the project. I had the same promise of the film, and the chance to put a different spin to the “band together” theme with piracy-related one.

UAAP Finals: Tams, Eagles pumped up

By Francis T. Ochoa

LONG BEFORE the curtains were lifted off the 73rd season of the UAAP this showdown for the title had been predicted.

Defending champion Ateneo de Manila and the Eastern U. Both squads did a good job of fulfilling their destiny.

In a campaign filled with upsets and heartaches, the Blue Eagles and the Tanmenars would meet once more in a championship showdown that has nobody guessing its script.

"We'll be good to win the trophy and win the weekend," Ateneo head coach Benjie Tugue said before taking a sports forum recently. "We'll just go out there and we'll be fighting."

Sitting courtside, but his Eagle will have an even stronger fire, one that likes to do away with outside help and instead focus on their own moral creed that was assembled all season long.

"We'll just do our best," said Ateneo coach Tugue.

Big names

The big names on both sides of the court are all ready.

Ateneo will be led by leaders that the way along with Erik Long, Francis Maranan, Justin Chua, Spencer Smith and Michaela.

For the Tanmenars, league MVP Ed Garcia and top scorer Terrence Romeo will provide the young blood to a team infused with veterans: Jeff Cresswell, Aldrick Baines, Jai Cordell, Tito Sumalde, Paul Jingo and Joe Escala.

On paper, the Tanmenars seem to have the edge. Not only have Garcia and Romeo bagged the top two individual awards this season, but guys like Baines and Cordell have scored their games in international events with the former. Gilas Pilipinas basketball squad.

But there is something about the 73rd season that makes the Tanmenars look like the underdog.

The final, packed arena filled with tradition, cheer-leading and chanting. The intense pressure of a championship game. All these make one something better. Experience.

And that is something Ateneo is loaded with.

The Eagles have 11 players who have played in at least one UAAP Finals before. For all their intense games, the Tanmenars have none.

"They are not as talented as the previous years but they got a lot of experience," said Ateneo player Jai Cordell. In the first round of the UAAP Finals, the Blue Eagles Conference Finals MVP who anchored the team against that was in 2002 and lost in the following year.

Contrasting styles

The championship duel features a battle of contrasting styles, and this should make things even more interesting.

The Tanmenars are the best offensive team in the UAAP averaging 70 points per game on 43.2 percent shooting from the field.

The Eagles, coached by one of the best coaches in the UAAP, average only 62.4 points, or 40.3 percent shooting from the field.

So it isn't hard to predict the game plan of both squads.

For the defending champion, the key will be to contain the Ateneo offense that has found its rhythm from a lot of mistakes.

In the Finals last season to Ateneo and La Salle, PUA scored only 62 and 66 points, respectively, or an average of 64.5 points while shooting 40.3 percent from the field.

For the Tanmenars, they'll have to focus on the defense and make the Eagles look like the underdog.

The Blue Eagles only allowed opponents to score over 70 points four times, and in two of those instances, the Eagles lost in the 72-60 and 74-70. The other two times, Ateneo almost lost to the 72-60 and 74-70.

So important as their mission may be, all these will be done on the wings of the underdog. The Tanmenars. Then, the title could be decided by just one game.

"We want to be the biggest team in going to win it," said former U. coach Armand Santos. (Inquirer report from Ateneo de Manila, U. de Manila)

IT'S GOING to be a close and tough battle for the UAAP men's basketball crown when Ateneo de Manila and the Eastern U. who have combined to win 10 of the last 18 titles in the nine conferences, contest for the championship of Season 73. The Tanmenars have the deeper bench, but the Eagles bring with them the experience of back-to-back titles, making the best-of-three series the toughest yet.

Third time's a charm or historic 20?

The FFA Forces (University Tamaraws) hope to be a celebratory finalist after the Finals, just as they were in 2003.

By Jocelyn W. Poy

UPPERCUT: and downs.

That's how it will be for the teams that finish this season's campaign.

A championship and a spot in the second round are at stake for both the Ateneo University and Neneo teams for the very first time since the Third UAAP men's basketball finals.

If you were to look at the UAAP's already-declared goals, the Tamaraws will emerge as the most successful team to appear in the league with a record of 20 basketball titles.

"We know it won't be easy," said FEU coach Glen Capacio. "We have to give all our heart and soul to this championship quest."

The Tamaraws, one of the five pioneering teams in the league, are extremely tied on top with the University of Santo Tomás (UST) with 17 titles.

A third straight championship will be theirs as well for the Blue Eagles as the last will mark Ateneo's first three-point since posting the trophy in 1976.

"I don't have a problem with the focus and concentration of the players because we have the experience, we're here before, we know how it feels like," said Ateneo coach Francisco Ochoa.

Another title run will put the Blue Eagles among the ranks of FEU, UST, La Salle and University of the East (UE) as teams to dominate the league for at least three consecutive seasons.

The Tamaraws, who played twice from May 3, are tipped as the slight favorite in the series predicted to go to five games.

The Tamaraws' loaded roster—led by John Villalón to Henry R. Garcia, veterans Aldrick Ramos and Paul Garces—and rookie of the year Ramon Poy—also draw comparisons from the FEU squad that topped the 2005 crown.

But as much as these teams may aim, even the 2005 squad's remarkable run, 60-point points-per-game difference.

"It's hard to compare," said Capacio. "The 2005 team was more balanced with Armand, Ramon, and Mark. In 2005, they had a lot of players in the Finals and they also won the championship in 2005. The 2005 team has more experience, while this is our first Finals."

And both know how a tough championship experience looks in a night game.

"Majority of the players in my team right now were here in 2005," said Mark.

"We know that feeling of being in a break through, of trying to win that last championship. We're experienced in it. But we also have our motivation—we're trying to represent our school through a win. We're just as hungry as they are."

Zeroing in on the UAAP finalists

By Jocelyn W. Poy

FEU: second finalist the weekend paired you're most likely a knockout. Ateneo's defense just before the game starts and you desperately want to score a consecutive fourth quarter.

But your victory boost in providing several teams per season as it is and your team don't move up with a victory yet to celebrate.

They've never before in a basketball final and you know, why not about the longer of your selection that you're at stake of a basketball run (2005)?

Here are a few facts and figures to get you started:

2005

Last year that FEU was in the Finals twice over La Salle (2-1).

2003

Last year that FEU and Ateneo met in the Finals (FEU won, 2-1).

19

Number of UAAP men's seasons that Ateneo has won by FEU (last time with UST).

BLACK championship.

Most number of consecutive Finals appearances by a school since the league adopted the Final Four format in 1994 (La Salle: 1994-2000).

8

Number of times out of 14 seasons (in 2005) since 1994 that the best of three championship series has gone the distance.

5

Number of UAAP men's seasons that Ateneo has won by Neneo (last time with UST).

4

Number of Finals appearances by Ateneo coach Ramon Black (2003, 2005, 2006 and 2007).

Number of consecutive Finals appearances by Ateneo.

WHO WILL BE THE BIG CHAMP?

Cheer for your school as they vie to be the UAAP Season 73 Men's Basketball Champ!

THE ANTICIPATED rip-and-tear finals clash between three-peat seeking Ateneo and title favorite Far Eastern U unfolds today, feeding memories of a not so distant past, when a different generation of Blue Eagles and Tamaraws battled for college basketball's most prestigious diadem.

In season 66, the Blue Eagles, paced by fiery guard La Tenorio and the rise of Ateneo's 2002 champions squad, were grinding for back-to-back titles when they measured straight into Far Eastern's and the Tamaraws, who were actually at the start of their reign.

But Tenorio, who is now an integral part of Ateneo in the Philippine Basketball Association, is pretty confident that the current showdown between Ateneo and Far Eastern U won't be as near copy of that previous battle, where Ateneo and the Blue Eagles won a sweep of the Finals.

Game 3
This time, at least, "it will match Game 1," said Tenorio.

"I hope Ateneo wins, but I really don't know what to expect," he admitted.

David Misonde, the grey Tamaraw point guard-to-beat with a classic basketball feel, also expects the series to result in a closer edge, all, but admits he does mean his what it takes to win.

"This team has the other edge," said

Misonde, who's also in the pre-teen team with Far Eastern.

"When we win again like that this year's history," (Tenorio's) Salas and (Misonde's) Basualde, it will come down to which team is stronger."

"I just hope to do my game."

Misonde:

Ateneo, now a malcontent with Far Eastern's loss, expecting the same role he had as a Tamaraw, had a more eloquent prediction. If you study the previous though, you'll realize a lesson has been learned, naturally.

"It's hard to predict, but if FEU takes Game 1, it will be a sweep," said Misonde. "If a teacher takes 3, the team that won Game 2 will have the momentum."

"I believe FEU has the talent, but they also need to play with the heart of a champion from now on. In all, FEU shouldn't be intimidated, they should defend the game."

Both Ateneo and FEU had almost equal legs in 2007 with identical 13-1 stints, but Ateneo took the Tamaraw had a better team than their back then.

"FEU really had more players that time, and Ateneo was just starting with its basketball program," said Tenorio, who ran the show for the Blue Eagles along with one-time UAAP MVP Rich Abadilla, the now-chaunting duo of Larry Ibañez and Rocky Guevarra.

The 2003 Tamaraws squad may not have a lot of talent, including the likes of Santos, Misonde, All Chan and Mark

Peaked in finals

"During the 2002 season, we were very good and at the same time our morale about being good is to win against ourselves," said Tenorio. "We were of course in the Finals that's why the change in morale games were all different ways," added Misonde. "We took a double-edge lead right in the first quarter and that helped us win. Defense, we just clicked."

But Ateneo's 2007 squad is more loaded than the 2002 version, with players like Eric Zamora, Rich Corp, Misonde, Misonde and Ryan Basualde leading the pack.

This decade the Blue Eagles, leading with a 10-4 record, internally, had of Ateneo's losses came against FEU, the only team the Eagles failed to conquer in the elimination rounds.

But Tenorio thinks that Ateneo's edge this season is its experience from previous championships, which that can quickly guard both enough fuel for yet another title run.

"They are not as talented as the previous years but they got a lot of experience from former players," Tenorio said.

Verse-to-verse

This year's Tamaraws, though veteran-laden, aren't as experienced. FEU doesn't have a single player in its roster that has experienced the intense pressure of being in the Finals.

But Tenorio believes that come game time, Ateneo will still have to pull some serious strings in order to improve the Tamaraws.

"They really have to find a way to beat FEU," said

Tenorio:

I hope Ateneo wins

Tenorio:

With a backbone led by MVP Rich Corp and top scorers Eric Zamora, along with a plethora of big men and wing players—the Tamaraws have proven to be the most talented and deepest team in the league much like the 2001 championship team.

The Eagles will see the defending champion but the Tamaraws have had championship experience.

"It's definitely not the advantage of the series. They're the team to beat," Tenorio said.

The loneliness of the long-distance actor

Janice de Belen gets candid

By Beth Aulis

WITH KATIE we were going about a lot of different moments when we interviewed Janice de Belen for her new book. After all, the 40-year-old actress started her career as a comedian at age 15, inspired by her father's stand-up act. But she's also a mother, a wife, and a friend. And she's got a lot to say about it.

JANICE (WITH BELLETTI) Enjoys high school and self-deprecating

When we told the actress that she was about to be interviewed, she was a bit nervous. But she quickly relaxed and started talking about her life. She talked about her father, her mother, and her career. She talked about the challenges of being a comedian, a mother, and a wife.
